[Continue reading] By Todd Bowerman With hundreds of channels and thousands of hours of programming, television poses a huge challenge for parents. Preventing children from watching inappropriate programming can feel like a Herculean challenge, but cable providers, TV manufacturers and internet streaming services have done what they can to make the process a little easier. Parents have several options for them to manage TV channels, to ensure they are not seen without supervision. Most modern TVs have built-in support for V-Chip, a special device that reads the rating of specific programs and controls whether they can be viewed. All TV shows are rated a rating; for example, a TV-MA program is considered only for adults, while a TV-G program is considered suitable for most audiences. If your TV has V-Chip support, you can use its parental controls or the Settings menu to ban shows based on their ratings. Adults can still view these apps with an access code, but children won't be able to watch them on any channel. Cable companies also include options to control which channels can and cannot be viewed. Comcast, for example, includes a Parental Control option on their DVR and set-top boxes that allow parents to block channels, as well as movies and TV shows based on their ratings. Time Warner and DirecTV offer similar options. Search for parental controls through the cable box main menu or contact your cable provider for help with specific hardware channel blocking steps. Many TV shows and channels are available via the web. Comedy Central, Cartoon Network's adult-oriented Adult Swim, Fox and many other networks have streaming options available either on their own website or on sites like Hulu. To protect your kids from certain TV content, you'll need to add a layer of protection to your computer, control software for your PC or Mac will enable you to control which websites your kids can and cannot visit, in addition to controlling media they can view via the web. Television has changed dramatically with the advent of streaming services, such as Hulu and Netflix. If your TV supports app installation, you'll need to take steps to use parental controls for those apps. Netflix, for example, has a wide library of content that parents may find unsuitable for children; parents must enable Netflix parental controls to ensure that there is no loophole in the protection. The best course of action is to monitor children closely and to manage the blocking of programming and channels as the need arises. Chris Ryan/OJO Images/Getty Images Pac-12 Network channels are available on a handful of TV providers, but DirecTV isn't one of them. While Dish Network, Time Warner Cable and Xfinity customers, among others, have access to the range of sports channels, DirecTV customers cannot see the content. DirecTV and Pac-12 Networks have failed to reach a licensing agreement. While the sports provider continues to try to make a deal with DirecTV, customers who want to view the content are advised to seek out other TV providers that carry the Pac-12 network's group of channels. Editor's note: DirecTV Now becomes AT & T TV Now, details here. As cord cutting becomes more popular, more companies are offering online TV services as alternatives to cable. And these cable competitors include satellite TV companies like DirecTV. Starting at $40 per month (a price increase will be August 1 will raise prices, from $35 per month), DirecTV Now allows you to stream live TV to your TV, phone or tablet. It is also a better value on paper than some of its competitors, who offer 60 channels in their starter kit. Sling TV, for example, gives you 30 channels for its start $20 price. YouTube TV charges $40 for its 60+ channels. The service has also increased its choice of on-demand title. Here's everything you need to know. Ever think DirecTV would be great if it weren't for the set-top box you're watching it? Then you might be interested in DirecTV Now, an online live-streaming service that requires zero new hardware but still gives you TV channels and on-demand content you love. How much does DirecTV Now, and is there a contract? DirecTV Now starts at $40 per month with its Live a Little package, which includes more than 60 live channels. DirecTV Now doesn't lock yourself into an annual contract but instead bills you monthly, so you can cancel whenever you want. What channels do you get from DirecTV Now's different packages? The Live a Little ($40 per month) package includes major networks like AMC, BBC America, Bravo, Cartoon Network, CNN, Comedy, Discovery, E!, Food Network, FX, FXX, National Geographic, Syfy, TBS, TNT and USA, as well as local broadcast networks (where available). A third stream, which you may need for a large household, can be added for an extra $5 per month. Sling includes one in its Orange package and three with its Blue Package (both cost $25 per month) and four on its $40-per-month plan. Hulu with Live TV also offers two streams, while YouTube TV provides three and PlayStation Vue offers five, with one for each of its consoles (PS4 and PS3) and three on other hardware. Where is DirecTV Now available? DirecTV Now is available in all 50 states (plus the District of Columbia), and it can join you when traveling within these areas. Unfortunately, you lose access if you travel to U.S. territories (such as Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands) or if you leave the United States altogether. Which streaming devices work with DirecTV Now? Because DirecTV Now is one of the more established streaming services, it is available on most devices. These include Roku, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Google Chromecast, iOS and Android devices, and Chrome and Safari browsers. Want an Apple TV 4K or Roku Streaming Stick? If you prepay for a certain number of months (which has ranged from 3 or 4) by DirecTV Now, you get that hardware free from DirecTV Now. Can I get DirecTV Now on my smart TV? Yes, but only if your smart TV has Android, Chromecast, Roku or Amazon Fire TV. What sports does DirecTV Now offer? DirecTV Now comes with a decent selection of sports programming, with its entry-level Live A Little packages including ESPN, ESPN2, FOX Sports 1 and NBCSN. Upgrade to the Just Right package, you get Big Ten Network, ESPN News, ESPN, the Network, SEC Network and Tennis Channel. The Go Big package adds CBS Sports Network, Fox Sports 2, NBA TV, NHL Network and Sportsman Channel. And if you pay for the Gotta Have It package, you'll get the Univision Deportes Network as well. How can I DVR display, and how many can I store? DirecTV Now recently introduced its True Cloud DVR, which is currently in beta, and limits users to 20 hours of content. As of June 4, DVR-recorded content is available not only on Android, iOS, Apple TV, Amazon Fire TV, Chromecast and web browser, but also on Roku devices and choose Smart TV. Roku notes that the DirecTV app may take longer to load on Roku Express memories and some TVs, and that it is looking to speed this up in the near future and that it will be reaching out to the users who own these devices, with a special offer. Recordings expire after 30 days. How do I get a free trial of DirecTV Now? If you sign up here, you'll receive a seven-day free DirecTV trial. To make sure you don't get accidentally billed, set a reminder on your smartphone for six days from the time you sign up, so you can reconsider whether it's worth the monthly fee. What kind of on-demand content is there? DirecTV Now's on-demand content becomes available immediately after a programme is broadcast (for selected channels) and within a few hours of a programme being broadcast for other content. DirecTV Now's spring update 2018 increased its library to more than 25,000 titles. Your listings may vary depending on your subscription package. How good are the reviews of DirecTV Now? Not very good. During a span of two reviews (original, follow-up) in 2017, Tom's Guide editor Marshall Honofro encountered inconsistent streaming quality. While his second attempt of DirecTV Now wasn't as bug-packed as his first, the mysterious Error 40 left to haunt the streaming experience, only less often. How bad was it? Live programming stuttered, and on-demand content often hits buffering errors. And while streams reached HD resolution, they didn't stay there consistently. Tom's Guide senior writer Caitlin McGarry encountered a similar buggy experience in 2018. In her report, she noted, DirecTV Now would cancel whatever show or movie I was watching and give me a server error message. She dismissed this message by pressing her Apple remote, but the fact that I've ever had to do it is problematic, she said. While it's a bad way to watch a sitcom or drama, things got even worse for her husband during the NCAA basketball tournament, when the error message appeared at least six times. He almost threw his Apple TV (which they got for free by paying for DirecTV Now) in the trash in frustration. Caitlin also noted that the Siri remote doesn't play nicely with DirecTV Now — something she hopes will change soon. On the upside, however, Caitlin noted that she happy to save $60 per month. That, plus the 4K Apple TV she got for free, did the experience a lot for her. MORE: Best: Best Services - Netflix vs. Hulu vs. Amazon vs HBOOver on Fortune, Aaron Pressman's review notes that DirecTV Now wasn't so bug-laden during his tests. His big whining, however, was that even if he gets to watch his Boston Celtics, he doesn't get the channels that play Red Sox games. How does DirecTV Now compare to Sling TV, PlayStation Vue and other cable replacement services? DirecTV Now's programming options stack up well against those of competitors, as the service starts with more than 60 channels. That's more than you get from rivals YouTube TV and Hulu with Live TV; both start with more than 50 channels for $40 per month. PlayStation Vue provides more than 45 channels for $40 per month and won us over to offer an intuitive interface and is one of the first cable replacement services with a cloud-based DVR. And while its new DVR service brings it closer to its rivals than ever before, DirecTV Now is falling into comparisons because of its poor, misloaded performance. So, ask yourself, what good are the extra channels if the experience is stuttering? We are in the process of evaluating DirecTV Now once and will keep you posted on our results. If you're looking for the most affordable option, the $40-per-month DirecTV Now is $15 percent more expensive than the $25 Sling TV (which offers fewer channels and charges $5 extra per month for the DVR service).
